Jace McTier's Son
Eric David McTier
"Painting with Daddy's colors"

Eric and Jayde (opposite page) are third generation McTier Artists. Each child paints, almost daily, and has an uncanny eye for color and composition. Eric sold his first painting at the age of three and Jayde isn't far behind.

Following in Lucy and David's footsteps, the entire McTier family of artists are capturing the world and unique history around them. Connect with them on social media @McTierArt and visit the website www.McTierArt.com for more information on the McTier family's pursuits.

Lucy McTier

A portraitist since 1979, Lucy McTier has work hanging in over 400 public and private collections and in select galleries throughout the world. Lucy had the opportunity to paint President Ronald Reagan in 1985 and present him with his portrait in the Oval Office along with her husband and five-year-old son, Jace. Lucy and Jace are presently capturing the history of the legendary Robert Tyre "Bobby" Jones Jr., bringing their splash of color to the rich history of golf. Prints from this collection will benefit the Chiari & Syringomyelia Foundation.

Lucy also paints children's illustrations, biblical themes, sporting art and wildlife. On the average, McTier paints eight to fifteen paintings a year, and is currently designing and painting public murals as well as commissioned portraits.

"Lucy's work is beautiful and she captured not only the likeness but the essence of my love for riding.... This (portrait of El Alemain) makes me feel like I am back at home."

- Ronald Reagan

"There are only three artists that have captured my grandfather's expression correctly and you are one of them!"

- Bob Jones IV

Hailed as the next LeRoy Neiman, Jace McTier's bold color and powerful use of impasto ranks him among today's leading sporting artists. With work collected by such clients as Angelo Dundee and George Foreman to corporate commissions, his paintings benefit charities through the sale of his original work as well as print sales. A recent project includes a joint venture with the Press On Fund and Jack Nicklaus to aid in finding a cure for childhood cancer.

In 2009, McTier teamed up with Angelo Dundee to recreate the history of boxing through the great trainer's eyes. To Jace, this was a dream come true. Master works such as "Titans of 5th St." as well as his interpretation of the "Phantom Punch" (or "Anchor Punch" that lifted Sonny Liston off the canvas and propelled Ali on his path to greatness) have been displayed all over the world and have brought McTier to meet and paint sporting legends such as Muhammad Ali, George Foreman and many of the boxing world's greats.

Jace's work underscored the talents of Dundee so faithfully that Jace was asked to allow his work to serve as a tribute on stage for Angelo's funeral in Tampa, Florida in early 2012. From the power and beauty of an equestrian event, the grace of tennis and golf, down to his violently beautiful interpretation of the sweet science of boxing- Jace captures the athlete's adrenaline rush on canvas. Recent works include the middleweight champion, Sergio Martinez, and he has released a line of products associated with both Sergio and the Miami 5th St. Gym.

Working with the Press On Fund and budding artist Brennan Simkins, a ten-year-old survivor of Adult Myeloid Leukemia, Jace has been able to create an Irish assemblage of major champions centered on a four-leaf clover design. Rory McIlroy, Darren Clarke, Padraig Harrington and Graeme McDowell (painted on four canvases) are tied together with the central clover element. With broad strokes and no fear, Brennan helped Jace begin the series and designed the clover where the paintings join together. The work is a tribute to the golfing greats of Ireland and to the power of love for the sport. Jace resides with his wife, Rachel, and their son, Eric and daughter Jayde in their studio home near Augusta, Georgia.

"This kid is the next Neiman. LeRoy is a great friend of mine, I helped him get started in boxing early by inviting him to sketch Carmen Basillio in the 50's and Jace knows his stuff. His knowledge of technique and use of color are fantastic! The painting he did of Ali throwing that right hand against Foreman in Zaire and the picture of Willie Pastrano- Willie never looked so beautiful!"

- Angelo Dundee

"Jace McTier and his art have both emerged as two of the most positive and dynamic influences in our personal lives and in our emission to cure pediatric cancer. Individually, Jace is one of the kindest and most generous people I know. I see his gift as something so much more than that of the artist, but as the capacity to communicate understanding and compassion through the graceful stroke of a brush."

- N. Turner Simkins
